Our readers well know that we are among the last to draw invidious distinctions on account of employment or circumstances. A lawyer may be a good legislator as well as any other man, though we think too many lawyers should not be sent to a legislative body, as it necessarily deprives other classes of a fair representation. But this year there are special reasons why so many should not be sent to Albany. In the first place, the Mechanics earnestly demand relief from the pressure of the State Prison Monopoly, and measures must The selegal young gentlemen mean to do the cost possible, and yet may give their sanction to a law which will do more harm than good, simply for want of practical knowledge.
